

Mercy Sisters Install Superior General

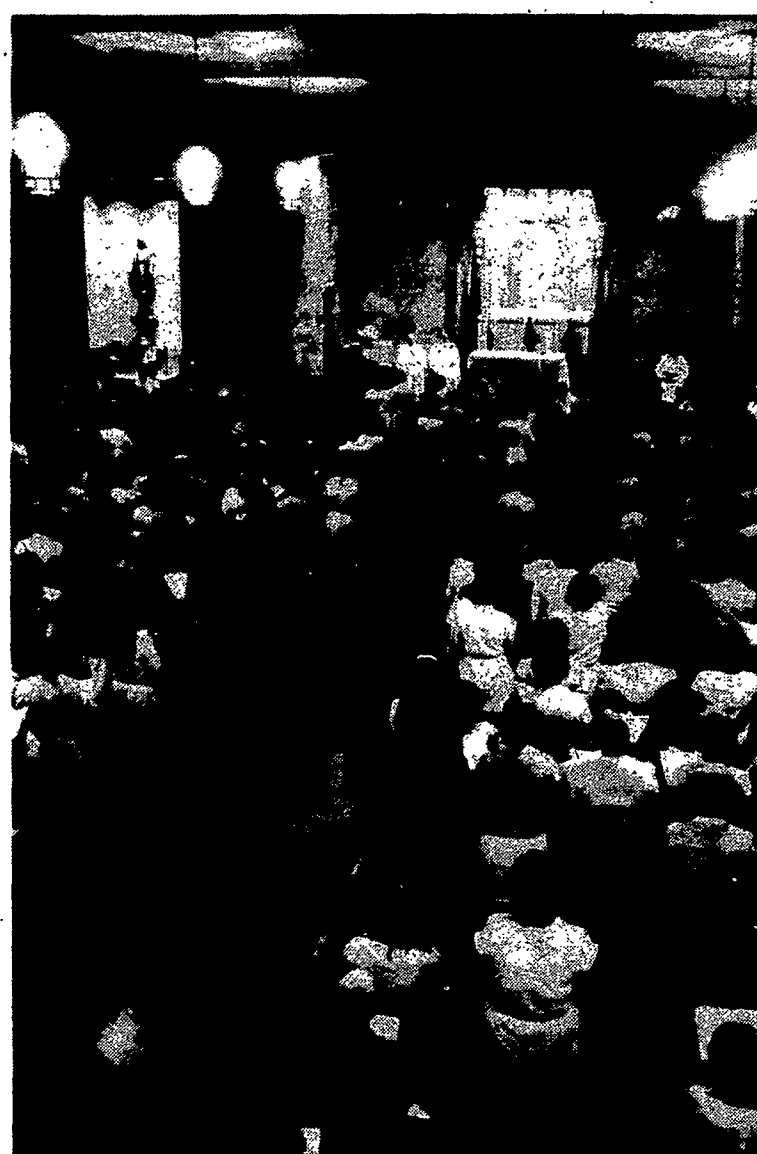

Sister Jean Marie Kearse follows in the processional on her way to be installed as superior general of the order.

The entire congregation extends its blessing to Sisters Jean Marie Kearse, Janet Korn, Ann Miller, Kathleen Milliken, and Nancy Whitley.

Sister Mary Leona Raymond accompanies the folk group and the gathering in the opening song "Jesus is Life."

Members of the congregation receive the Eucharist at Our Lady of Mercy chapel, which was filled almost to capacity.

Referring to the day's gospel about the Transfiguration, Mark 9:2-10, Bishop Clark drew an analogy between the Sisters of Mercy — with their love and richness that brings those in darkness and bondage into the light and freedom of Christ's passion — and the light on top of the mountain during the Transfiguration. Bishop Clark pointed to the many beneficiaries of the goodness and warmth of the Sisters of Mercy.

THOUGHTS TO CONSIDER

EDWIN SULEWSKI

FUNERAL DIRECTOR

Do some people need special help dealing with grief?

Grieving people can experience numbness, anger, guilt, depression and anxiety. Over a period of time most people work through these feelings. But some, as many as 25 out of 100, have excessive difficulty dealing with their grief. They may be so depressed and confused that they can neglect important activities such as feeding children or going to work. The bereaved may cut themselves off from others, drink excessively or become very angry. Their grief may last much longer or be more intense than seems appropriate. People who experience excessive difficulties need extra support from friends and relatives. They may benefit from professional counseling. People who need such help should not be ashamed to seek it.

The evening of August 6 was a special evening for the Sisters of Mercy. Not only was it the occasion of their superior general's installation in a Eucharistic celebration, but it was also the Feast of the Transfiguration.

Sister Jean Marie Kearse is not new to the responsibilities of superior general of the Sisters of Mercy. She is entering her second four-year term as leader of the congregation. "She is an unusually good leader with that special gift to lead with personalization and care," said Sister Elaine Kolesnik.

Joining Sister Jean Marie in the installation were general council members Sisters Janet Korn and Nancy Whitley, who are also serving their second term, and two new members of the council, Sisters Ann Miller and Kathleen Milliken.

In his homily, Bishop Matthew H. Clark told the congregation: "to look backward to the community of those that have gone before us and to the mystery of His love: to remember that His presence and radiance is always loving."
