Project Life members also began approaching and trying to dissuade women from entering the hospital to have abortions — a tactic known as sidewalk counseling. Finally, Long and several others have engaged in what they call "rescue missions," during which they enter rooms where they believe abortions are performed and refuse to leave.

Father Mugavero began participating in the prayer vigils and sidewalk counseling at Genesee Hospital shortly after he was assigned to St. Theodore's Parish in Gates.

He considers sidewalk counseling an outgrowth of the counseling offered by such groups as Birthright, rather than as an entirely original approach. "What we're doing is making a last-minute appeal to the person," he said. "This is much more crisis counseling."

For Father Mugavero, sidewalk counseling is neither a pleasant task, nor one that grows easier with time and practice. "Every encounter is different, and every one is hard," he said. "You can usually tell when you're talking to someone whether they're there for (an abortion). The others are not reacting in a way that is anxious or tense."

The most typical response he receives is "I don't want to talk about it." But he has also found that some of the people who are most adamant and upset at his approach are those who are fighting hardest against their own inclinations.

"You try in a gentle way to tell them what we're offering," he said. "You use whatever approaches you can to try and engage them. I think the most important thing is to let them know they are loved." To date, he estimates that he has changed perhaps a dozen individuals' minds.

Father Mugavero has observed what is perhaps an even greater need for conversion inside the Church, despite the fact that it professes to oppose abortion.

He noted that the Church in Philadelphia placed all its moral and physical power behind the successful movement to oust the Marcos government. "I personally believe that the Church in the United States needs to see this issue in the same way and to use all its moral and even physical force to stop it," he said. "I think at this point, the Church wants abortion stopped, but it doesn't want to be the instrument that stops it."

Cardinal O'Connor will install eighth bishop of Syracuse in cathedral ceremony

Catholics throughout central New York and the Southern Tier will celebrate the installation of Bishop Joseph T. O'Keefe as the eighth bishop of Syracuse on Monday, August 3. Nearly 1,200 people are expected to attend the installation ceremony, which will begin at 3 p.m. in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in downtown Syracuse.

Cardinal John J. O'Connor of New York City will install the former auxiliary bishop, who has served in the Archdiocese of New York throughout his entire career as a priest.

Bishop O'Keefe, 68, was appointed by Pope John Paul II to succeed retiring Bishop Frank J. Harrison. The appointment was announced June 16. Previously, Bishop O'Keefe had been pastor of St. John the Evangelist Parish in Manhattan. In addition to a background in Catholic education, he has served as archdiocesan chancellor, vicar general and apostolic administrator.

More than 30 visiting bishops from as far away as Louisiana and Poland will participate, along with nearly 375 priests from throughout the Syracuse diocese and New York City. Also participating will be Catholic men and women from each of the diocese's 171 parishes as well as representatives of various Church ministries and diocesan groups.

Live coverage of the event will be broadcast over Syracuse-area cable television. Taped coverage will also be shown on Binghamton station WBNG-TV, Channel 12 (check local listings for times).
