Auxiliary's illness overshadows Syracuse installation

By Jim Murphy
 Syracuse (NC) — Bishop Joseph T. O'Keefe was installed as bishop of Syracuse Aug. 3 amid concern for the diocese's auxiliary, Bishop Thomas J. Costello, who suffered a mild heart attack just hours before the installation ceremony.

At the beginning of the 3 p.m. ceremony, Cardinal John J. O'Connor of New York announced to the 1,200 gathered at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception that Bishop Costello, 58, had suffered a heart attack at 10:30 a.m. and had been taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

"The doctors assured us that he got there in good time and should recover very well," the cardinal told the audience.

He asked those gathered to keep Bishop Costello in their prayers during the ceremony, and in remarks at the end of the installation Cardinal O'Connor asked the crowd to stand and applaud Bishop Costello's service to the church.

The installation began with Bishop O'Keefe, 68, Cardinal O'Connor's vicar general in the New York Archdiocese since 1984, following the cardinal, 30 visiting bishops, and more than 400 priests and deacons in a processional.

Father James O'Brien, rector, greeted him at the door of the cathedral and presented him with a small metal crucifix used in the mid-1600s by Jesuit missionaries and Catholic Native Americans in central New York.

In his homily, Bishop O'Keefe drew on the Bible readings from Isaiah and St. Paul's second letter to the Thessalonians, which speak of being faithful servants of the Lord, and the growth of faith in the face of persecution and trial. He told the congregation that the verses held "clues" about his goals for the Church in Syracuse.

In a press conference before the installation Bishop O'Keefe said that he would remain in the Diocese of Syracuse until "I am buried."

Bishop O'Keefe was named June 16 to succeed retiring Bishop Frank J. Harrison. A native of New York City, he has served his entire career as a priest of the Archdiocese of New York. He is the eighth bishop in the 101-year history of the Syracuse diocese.

Bishop O'Keefe met with reporters again Aug. 4 and said doctors told him Bishop Costello, a native of the Syracuse diocese, would be in the hospital for two weeks and would spend an additional six to eight weeks at home recovering.

THOUGHTS TO CONSIDER

EDWIN SULEWSKI
FUNERAL DIRECTOR

Why is there such an emphasis on death and grief today?

There have been great advances in medical science which have removed death from the daily lives of most Americans. Because of this we are generally unfamiliar with death and grief. We are fortunate that our experience with death has lessened, but nevertheless it's important to learn about the things we can do to help ourselves and friends. Making wills and understanding how to help our grieving friends will help us cope better when the stress of a death comes into our lives. Avoiding death by ignoring it, by not making wills or by not going to funerals or visitations is a denial of reality!

We purchase all forms of insurance to protect our family & assets, not because we expect the worst to happen, but to be prepared. Doesn't it make sense then to prepare for what will happen. Let our trained counselors assist you with the many options available in planning for a worry-free future.

Pope to meet Jewish leaders

(NC) — Jewish leaders have accepted an invitation to meet with Pope John Paul II and leading Vatican officials in late August, but the meeting's agenda remains unclear. A Vatican official said Aug. 6 that the meeting probably would deal with a broad range of issues, but would not include discussions about the pope's June 25 meeting with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim.

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, director of international relations for the American Jewish Committee, said participants would discuss preset topics, including the pope-Waldheim meeting and its ramifications.

Archbishop defends pope

(NC) — Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco has issued a four-page letter defending Pope John Paul II's June meeting with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim and the Holy See's refusal to establish formal relations with Israel. The July 29 letter to the people of the archdiocese followed sidewalk picketing July 23 in front of San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein's home, as she hosted a papal-visit fund raiser.

In his letter, Archbishop Quinn, whose archdiocese will welcome the pope Sept. 17-18, urged Jews to put the Waldheim visit in perspective, and said San Francisco's spirit of collaboration and respect between Catholics and Jews must continue.

End sought for abortion funds

(NC) — President Reagan, addressing right-to-life leaders July 30, called for new federal regulations to end abortion counseling and referrals by federally funded family-planning programs.

But Reagan press spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, in an immediate clarification, said "this does not cut off funding from clinics that provide abortion counseling, but rather requires that any counseling they do be privately financed and not financed with federal funds."

Papal Mass is hot topic

(NC) — San Antonio's top health official resigned Aug. 3, saying that hundreds may die in sweltering heat during the city's papal Mass. But an archdiocesan spokesman said Aug. 6 that the official, Dr. Katherine Rathbun, had "overreacted." The archdiocese is making every effort to minimize the heat's effects upon Mass participants, the spokesman said.

Temperatures in San Antonio typically are in the mid-90s during September, Rathbun claimed lack of adequate water, toilets and space at the treeless Mass site would make the scheduled Sept. 13 Mass unsafe.
