Bishop Kearney juniors honor retiring class adviser

Bishop Kearney High School An appreciative junior class honored Delores Clements at its junior prom, Friday, May 13, presenting her with long-stemmed roses and a monetary gift. Clements, the junior class adviser, is retiring this June after 22 years of dedicated service to Bishop Kearney. Sad to see her go, the junior class was the first to honor Clements on her retirement this year.

A familiar face at Kearney, Clements can be found teaching math or attending twirling practice. She now serves as moderator of the twirlers, part of the infamous Bishop Kearney

No, I do not think that drug testing should Marching Kings. In earlier years, Clements frequently could be found practicing with the color guard as their moderator.

Clements is respected by all on or off the field. A mothering and dedicated nature has made her very popular and loved by her students.

Known for her caring and understanding disposition, she is very generous with her time. Clements, known as the "lollipop queen," often brings in lollipops or baked goods to be bought by her students to benefit mission collections. Clements is always bringing in birthday cakes for the faculty members on their birthdays, which is one more example of her dedication to the population of Kearney.

Aside from her other duties Clements gives after-school tutoring sessions for students who are having trouble in math. She also can be found advising the juniors with their class activities and has played vital roles in their success.

Clements, along with her husband Bill, are members of the Century Club, which provides assistance to needy students who otherwise couldn't attend Kearney.

Notre Dame High School Procrastination: It's a word that can disrupt lives, create problems and turn the world upside-down. Yet for many, it seems to be the credo of life. Why do people like to torture themselves? What makes this personal hell so enticing?

The tendency to procrastinate seems to be avoidable. Just budget your time, work hard and you'll be OK. Yet, that sometimes seems impossible. Perhaps the example of "John" offers a good way to see how this can happen. "John" doesn't really exist, but he has the qualities of a number of real people. One hopes that a brief overview of his life will strike a familiar chord.

John is a pretty nice person. He doesn't do a lot of malicious things and tries to be friends. However, he tends to put things off, and it can lead to problems.

John is not dumb. On the contrary, he's a fairly intelligent person. Unfortunately, he slacks off when it comes to his studies. His homework is put off until the last possible moment, when a mad rush ensues and the work gets done haphazardly. Thus, he has a wellearned reputation as an underachiever. He

Fisher accepts invitation to visiting fellows program

Do you think drug testing should be permitted in the work place?

St. John Fisher College has accepted an invitation to join the Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellows program, under which guest speakers from a variety of professions will visit the school for an entire week. The extended stay will allow Visiting Fellows to participate in classes, seminars, public lectures and informal discussions.

Under the program, Fisher will host one guest each semester for the next three academic years. Speakers available to the college will include representatives of business, journalism, government and other professions. Among the more prominent professionals taking part are: an associate editor of The Wall Street Journal, a senior editor of Newsweek, a chairman emeritus of Ogilvy & Mather International, and several former ambassadors.

Founded in 1873, the Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellows program was established to encourage the flow of ideas between academic and non-academic worlds, and to help students see the relation between a liberal education and their lives after graduation. As of 1985, 170 institutions had received more than 1,000 visits through the program.

Some of Clements' former students are currently teaching alongside her. When these former students spoke of their memories of Mrs. Clements' classes, her storytelling was a common memory. One former student who is now a member of the faculty, remembers Clements ending each class with the words, "Now class, that is all I can say."

keeps putting off plans with his friends, and people wonder about him and where his life is going. Basically, John feels he's caught in a whirlpool of confusion, and what frustrates him most is that the confusion is of his own making.

What John and other procrastinators experience is terrible. Yet it still is welcomed. Unfortunately, it usually catches up with them later, such as final exams or big social events. Perhaps it is the adventure of racing against time and often denying its existence that attracts it to people.

But the adventure will soon pass and reality will set in. When a procrastinator has to face the music, the tune is not lively. If anyone knows a procrastinator, point out the warning signs, the nervous mannerisms, the look of exhaustion, the untapped potential. Then the whirlpool may soon cease to exist.

Applicants must be 16 years old by July 2, and have either a learner's permit or operator's license. Students should bring either their permit or their license to the first class. Call (716)865-1000 for information.
