Study abroad, internships, jobs are career pluses

By Dean Carroll Copley News Service

prestigious New York publishing cedures and deadlines. firm.

grades," she recalls. "What they the long run," says Andrew Shersummer I spent working for the Sherwood Company, the nation's local arts council. I edited a small largest full-service human renewsletter for free and wrote pub- sources consulting firm. lic service announcements. And "Competition for entry-level pothat volunteer job got me started sitions is tough for new graduates ested in the total person.

on its own will no longer make the Sherwood advises approaching grade. If you want to get a good internship interviews as seriously job, you'd better have some work as if applying for a full-time job experience or other special skill after graduation. "If you act like a that's going to catch a recruiter's professional from day one, you'll attention.

INTERNSHIPS

Internships have always been WORK STUDY considered a slice of life, a bit of The current trend in work-study like." Whether paid or unpaid, jobs consisting of mundane tasks every field.

piled "The 1988 Ip-anships," a ture growth. massive listing of 5,000 oppor- To find a job that provides a tuniies (including 6,410 overseas good fit, students should contact positions) in 24 career areas that their campus work-study or stuare grouped into seven categories: dent 'employment office. Classi-Arts, Communications, Human fied advertisements in local news-Services, International, Public Af- papers are another valuable refairs, Regional/National Clear-source. If you have a certain inghouses, and Science/Industry.

Each listing is packed with information on the duties of the po-When Ann Crawford graduated sition, training offered, qualificafrom the College of William and tions necessary, availability of Mary in the early 1980's, it wasn't college credit, length and season her grade point average (3.8) or of the internship, pay and fringe her choice of courses (eclectic, benefits, availability of housing, with an emphasis on English liter- opportunity for future full-time ature) that landed her a job with a employment and application pro-

"Work experience for students "They barely looked at my pays more than an hourly wage in were really interested in was the wood, president of Goodrich & with little or unrelated work expe-Like high school students who rience," he says. "Internships are bolster a weak academic average great hands-on introductions to with worthy causes and outside in- the professional world. Students terests, college graduates are who work as interns gain an extra learning that employers are inter- edge later by learning about career choices and adding a valu-Brilliant academic achievement able credential to their resumes."

be treated professionally on the job," he says.

"what the working world is really programs is decidedly away from these mini-apprenticeships offer like envelope-stuffing and data invaluable experience in virtually entry. Both employers and student employees are now interested in Writer's Digest Books has com- jobs which offer potential for fu-career in mind, ask someone who's earn. made it in that job what they did when they were in college.

PART-TIME JOBS

Waiting tables at the student ACADEMIC CAMPS union and typing papers for pay school. These programs offer real-trance sweepstakes. world experience in a student's slates into contacts made, and references gained.

Today's intensely career-mindadapt to the responsibilities of a part-time job because they are altions through the grades they ing course for more than 10 years. wich, Conn. 06830.

One television cameraman once stantly sharpening their reading be answered in less than one minfilmed mice in a psychology lab and writing skills while learning ute. for a professor's research project. more about their major fields of It's not glamourous, but it's a study. They should look for jobs SUMMER STUDY ABROAD where they can utilize these tal-between working and going to them an edge in the college en- education."

chosen field, experience that tran- help students bring up unaccept- ranging from 3 to 12 weeks. Colable SAT scores. When the cut-off lege students, high school seniors point for the more prestigious and interested adults may particischools remains high, parents con- pate in most programs. ed students are easily able to sider the money for such courses For a copy of the 1988 Summer well spent.

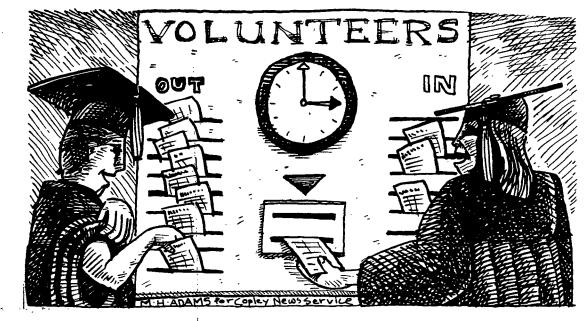

ready accountable for their ac- ters has provided one such coach- 102 Greenwich Avenue. Green-

Among their tips for taking tests In addition, by virtue of the ri- is the suggestion that questions be gors of college, students are con-scanned to determine if they can

Being able to speak another language is a definite plus in today's business world. Students who have participated in summer study Computer camp, space camp, abroad programs often have a are two ways to make money music camp - these are all places head start in dealing with internapart-time, but they don't have that provide specialized training tional business clients. At the much in the way of career poten- within a campus setting. High American Institute for Foreign school students have learned that Study, the philosophy is that "an Cooperative education pro- a couple of summers getting train- international experience is an imgrams allow students to alternate ing at a computer seminar gives portant component of a student's

The Institute offers an 88-page In many areas, cram courses brochure describing programs

Study Abroad Catalog, write: The Huntington Learning Cen- AIFS College Division, Dept. P-2,

negotiate the perfect package

By Debra Lee Baldwin Copley News Service

You've got the job of your dreams — almost.

How can you make sure you get to regain lost ground. yourself with information.

A job involves much more than with a diplomatic answer: a title and base salary.

to do to earn your pay and perks. range for the job?" vancement?

It's tricky to find out how much and other perks. cruiters or employment agencies. in the first place. Ask your contacts within the orwell, go ahead and request a copy (or whatever the amount is). Wait. of the company's personnel prac- The pause will be upsetting to a salary schedule.

wants to meet your demands, "We didn't discuss a car allowwherever possible. "I don't want ance. Suppose I add $300 a month somebody to come in here still more for that?' rankled that they didn't get the But if the reply is, "Sorry, that's salary they wanted," says the the best I can do," at least you chief executive of one corporation. know where you stand.

fits, salary range and the scope of a compromise. You could begin at ments before you begin negotiat- formance is good — and of course Zief).

What is your rock-bottom, monthly financial need? You can't Your resume was right-on. Your afford to take a job that pays less.

winning first interview has led to And don't settle for less than salary range. Employers prefer to both of you to win. a second, job-clinching meeting. your last salary. It takes too long hire people at or below the midthe best possible offer? The secret You're better off if you don't to effective negotiation is to arm discuss your past salary. Of and to protect the company's in ment, additional education, mov- work to go for an advanced decourse, you'll be asked. Be ready ternal salary structure.

Plan to research your prospec- trate on the position we're talking you're a good negotiator. Be consitive employer's compensation about with your firm. The salary I practices just as you did other im- had with my other company was

Discover how much overtime is Avoid revealing your past saldemanded, and whether you'll be ary, but if you must, mention the paid for it. Will you be required to maximum for the package you travel? Is there potential for ad- had at your old job. Add to your $3,000 per month salary the car the job is worth, but not impossi- If the employer is first to sugble. Professional and trade organ- gest the salary amount, it may be izations can help. Check with re- more than you thought you'd get

Look up at the ceiling. Pause a few seconds. Frown just a little If your first interview went and say, "Hmmmmmm, $4,000" tices, a description of benefits and the employer. He may say, "Well, suppose we up that $4,000 to Chances are, your employer $4,500. Would that be better?" Or,

Knowing the company's bene- If the amount is too low, suggest your duties is just the beginning. the offered salary, with a job re-you're worth.

allow room for raises in the future bonuses, profit sharing, equip-

"I really would like to concento show your new employer that time, and more. derate of the company's needs.

portant aspects of the operation. based on different work and re- erative enterprise," says Gerard I. a gas credit card, with mainte- you want. Research indicates that Find out what you're expected sponsibilities. What is the salary Nierenberg, author of "The Com- nance and insurance paid by the those who ask for more end up Understand your own require- view in three months. If your per- plete Negotiator," (Nierenberg & employer.

your employer are working out a portant. Be realistic. Most jobs have a solution together. The goal is for

In addition to salary, the many point of the range in order to forms of compensation include formance, be sure it is realistic.

$10,000 or more per year. The receive the degree. "Think of negotiation as a coop- ideal is a company-leased car plus

If you have a large family, the it will be - you will then receive Attitude is important. Job nego- quality of health, life and dental the additional amount you believe tiating is not a battle. You and insurance plans is especially im-

Bonuses are best if they're tied to specific accomplishments. But if a bonus is based on your per-

Can you have time off from ing expenses, a pension plan, a gree? Check into how much of this This is an excellent opportunity car, health insurance, vacation expense the company is wi. i.g. to pay, and if promotions or pay in-A car allowance can be worth creases will follow when you > Don't be afraid to ask for what with more.

Congratulations to the Class of '89

