

Seventh-grader Jennifer Neldrich prepares a slide of tobacco to be microscopically examined. She points to her mother, a smoker, as the inspiration for her project. "I want her to quit," says Jennifer.

Capturing first place among seventh-graders in Holy Cross School's seventh- and eighth-grade science fair were Matthew Van Durme (left) and Kevin Van Allen. Above, they prepare to demonstrate their award-winning project, which simulates the clean-up of a miniature oil spill.
