Diocese of Rochester

Thursday, May 16 1991

Inside:

222				44		W. 18
Alo	no t	ne W	V			200	7
2000			3336 K 100 K	200		- Late of the	30000 30000
	und	the C	CITE	38		308	S X
200	27700		69.39		3.00	49.0000	%83
	end	ar			-WP6	ges l	: 5
90/4 SA 1/4	3837,004,009		204000000	J. 1000 1000 1000 1000 1000 1000 1000 10			2.29
	SSIT	eds				306
200				(A. J. M.)	792232		2000
870	umr	iists .			2306	5 15
200	ILLE	3			ges t	13	18

NACONAL SANSAN MARKATAN (2011)	CANADA SAN CANADA SANC		250000000000000000000000000000000000000
		200 September 200	70.000
Lengt News		*	1.77
Local News	***********
969 C. S.		20 26 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20	COMBINED TO SOUTH
Obituaries		00 00 900 400 400 400 400 400 400 400 400 4	200
			1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1

			000000000000000000000000000000000000000
	CC4/3//4500425*		7 THE ST.
Opinion	*	Personal C
		11975 May 22 C 8 68 11 20 1	200-200
Sports
8 2 2 2 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3		Janes	V 18 € 26

Market - 100 (100 /4 (104 (17 + 17 4 (14 5 (17 +	00.4984000000000000000000000000000000000		02 5 000000000000000
World & Na	ILAR	z Lan
Marine Buck Barrier and South Barrier			- 10 St. 10 St.
			30,900 C 1880 C 18
		D.
Voidh		~ C.	1 A 1 - 10x 2/ 8

Retirement population challenges church

er Florian Reichert, 350, began capeer as a post at the ad ha since published

Miningson Joseph and Gerard Gefell, 15-year-old twin brothers, spent the first few weeks of May clearing debris from a May 1 storm that swept off Lake Ontario over their 150-sere farm in Cape Vin-

At 78, Sixter Agnes Mary Lineban, SSI, still does occasional parish visiting at Immaculate Conception Parish in Elmira, and has time at night to watch sports on television.

Father Joseph Gaynor, 72, is part of the regular Sunday Mars and homily rota-tion at St. Francis of Assist Parish in Auburn while living in community with other retired priests in the rectory of $1. Alphonsus Parish

These four are among the many retired priests and religious who served in the Diocese of Rochester. In their retirement years they have found not only ways keep active and to pursue interests, but also to continue serving the diocese and the Host retired religious continue working for their congregations in a variety of unpaid ministries: Fiere Sister Josephine Stowell, SSJ, 84, performs one of several ministries the Sisters of St. Joseph call "contributive services" — Ironing clothing at the order's St. Joseph Convent Infirmary.

Father Joseph Donovan; 76, who retired in 1985 as pastor of St. Mark's Church in Greece, works on a homily in his room at the SSJs' infirmary.

Unlike lay people in secular occupa- the Diocese of Rochester implemented a tions, however, priests and religious never really retire from their vocations.

Retirement is an ambiguous word to use for priests," noted Father John S. Hayes, 76, former pastor of St. Patrick's, Aurora: "We retire from being passors, but we never retire from being priests."

"You are always a woman religious, so what we say is they retire from a particular ministry, and they find volunteer word to do," observed Sister Ann Miller, supersus general of the Sisters of Mercy

But the growing numbers of retirees pose a serious challenge — not only for be Discept of Rochester but also for reions orders thronobout the nation.

Until the 19(0s, few dioceses or congrogations set uside funding for the re-tirement of priests and religious.

Dioceian priests simply worked until they were no larger able to do so. And re-ligious congregations relied on the in-come generate I by a steady stream of some members to support their retired

But after the Second Visicen Council, e. Visicen immulated that discesses there region is been ago 75 — and policy that priests retire from administrative duties at age 70. That policy has since been amended to allow priests to continue in administrative posts until 75 if they so choose, or before 70 under special circumstances can while the stream of recruits for congregations has dwindled to a trackle, forc-LV Ling orders to stretch the in-comes of fewer and fewer working mem-bers to support growing numbers of re-

The Diocese of Rochester instituted a pension plan for priests in 1967. That coupled with personal savings and the Social Security payments clergymen make as self-employed workers — have helped meet the financial needs of diocesan priests.
As the local ranks of retired priests have grown to the current figure of 79, however, diocesan priests have begun debuting the possibility of establishing a retirement home for well priests — a project that raises questions about possi-ble sites and costs, and shout who would operate such a facility.

the other hand, appears far more drastic — both locally and nationally. Orders have faced mounting fiscal problems produced by the cost of supporting retired members — and in some cases have been forced to custoil minuteses to continue supporting these retirees.

In fact, the Tri-Conference Retirement Office - which was created by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, and the Conference of Major Superiors of Men's Institutes in response to the retirement-funding problem — estimated in 1990 that $5.6 billion dollars would be needed to meet the retirement needs of U.S. men and women religious.

t the time that estimate was made, religious orders across the country had approximately $2.6 billion in funds available to meet the need - leaving a shortfall of approximately $3 billion

The office determined that this enormous shortfall would last only approximately until the late 1990s — by which time many of the religious who have inadequate pension coverage would have

To help religious orders meet their refirement needs until the late 1990s, the office in 1988 launched an annual, nationwide collection with a 10-year life. span. The first three collections have nested more than $73 million, reported Sister Mary Oliver Hudon, SSND, director of the Tri-Conference Retirement Office, during a telephone interview with the Catholic Courier.

In addition, some dioceses across the country — including Syracuse and Albany — have conducted their own drives, reporting collections of $16.5 million to the retirement office during the same

Funds from the national collections are distributed to congregations across the country, including ones serving in the Rochester diocese. As of July 1, 1991, for example, the Sisters of St. Joseph of Rochester will have received more than $400,000, Sister Hudon reported. Yet the Diocese of Rochester is the

The situation for religious orders, on londy diocese in the country that thus far has run neither the national nor a local drive, Sister Hudon said.

Mark Seeberg, diocesan director of development, explained that the decision not to participate in the national drive was based on a recommendation contained in the report of the Five Year Financial Planning Process Task Force, released in April, 1987

The task force determined that approximately $70 million would be required to meet the retirement needs of local religious. Of that sum, $30 million was available, leaving a shortfall of approximately Since most of the religious serving in the diocese are members of two Rochester-based women's congregations the Sisters of Mercy and the Sisters of St. Joseph - the task force recommended that a local fundraising effort be mounted, with the diocesan portion of the effort being $20 million.

That recommendation was coupled with a task force recommendation that the diocese establish a development office. Seeberg explained, noting that Bishop Matthew H. Clark accepted both recommendations.

But before a capital campaign to raise monies for retirement could begin. Continued on page 19

Seter Mario Chin, Kono, SS., M, Serie gulles Plicaie, valida are fold a to Comer Stone Crain More at the 6SJ motherholes.