

Players warm-up on the basketball courts lining Rochester's Main Street as they prepare to compete in the 1991 Jumpin' Jack Shootout Basketball Tournament July 20. A record 700 teams entered the downtown event this year.

Jumpin' Jack offers hot fun

The third annual Jumpin' Jack Basketball Tournament, held July 19-21 as part of Rochester's Main Event '91, featured 700 teams, 100-degree temperatures, and a one-on-one "grudge" match between Syracuse University Basketball Coach Jim Boeheim and ESPN sportscaster Dick Vitale.

Boeheim, a star basketball player at Lyons High School and Syracuse University, easily defeated Vitale — a frequent critic of Boeheim — 15-3 in their July 19 battle.

Meanwhile, 1991 McQuaid Jesuit High School graduates Jason McKinney, Mike Montesano and Ted Naylon, along with 1991 DeSales High School graduate Bob McFadden, swept all five of their games to win their division in the men's 18-24 bracket.

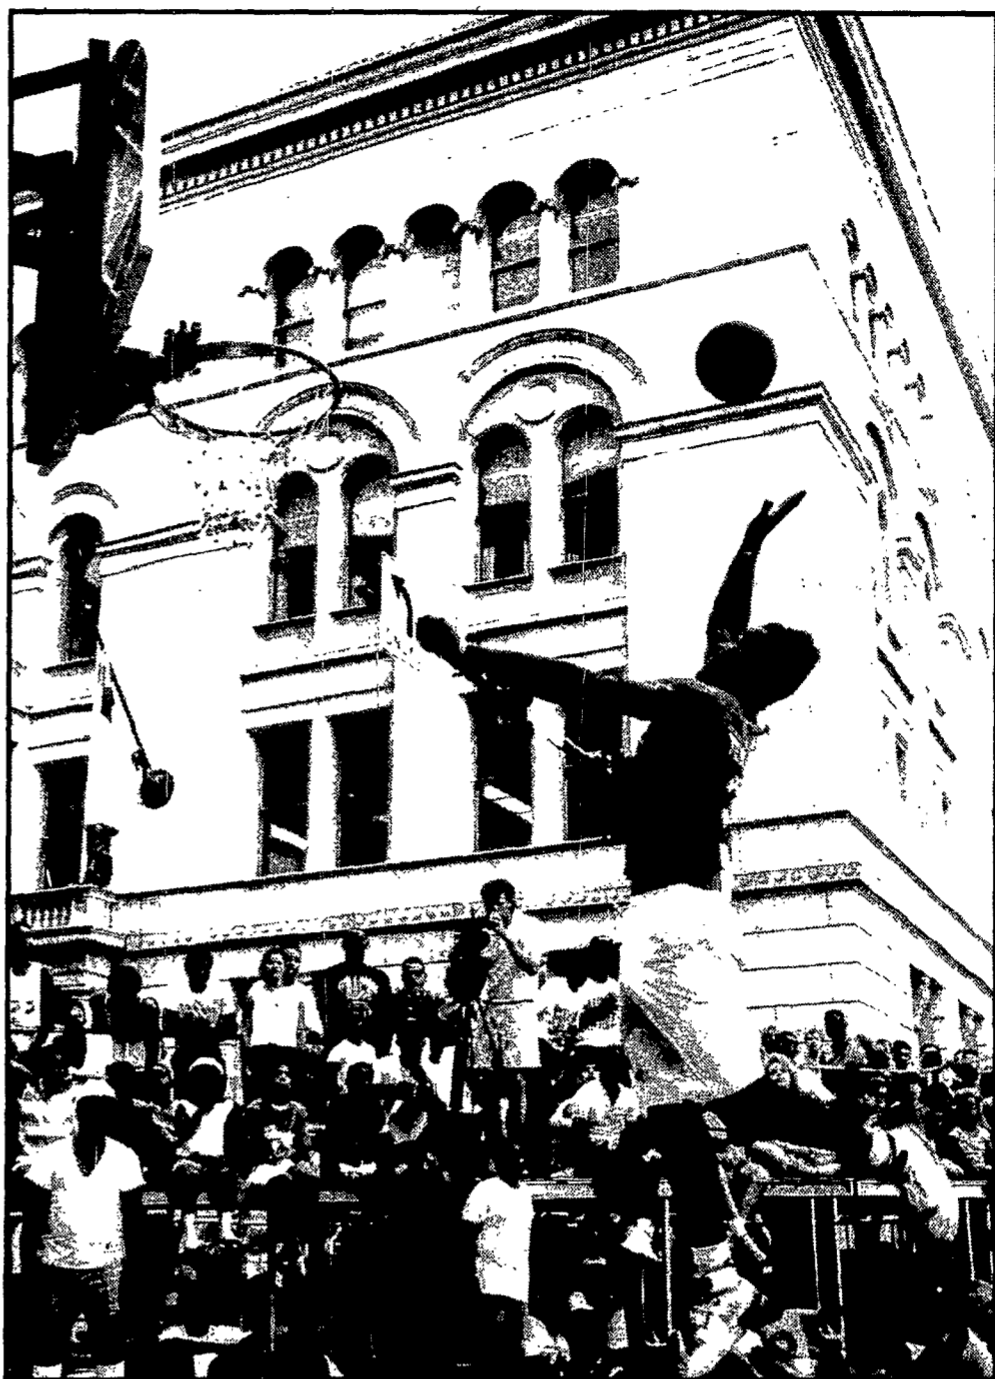

The quartet played as "Lethal Weapons," a reference to the nickname given to McKinney, Montesano and Naylon after the trio led McQuaid to the Section 5 Class A crown and the state Class A semifinals last March.

Lethal Weapons was eligible to compete for the overall championship in the men's Open Division, but the competition was cancelled due to rough play by two other teams in the semifinal round.

Chris Washington, who played on Teen Wolf, gets ready to dunk the ball during the Slam Dunk competition on July 19. Washington won the event.

AQ names Tim Reynders to coach girls basketball

ROCHESTER — Timothy G. Reynders, who helped lead the Aquinas boys' basketball team to the sectional finals in 1986, has been named to succeed Dan Bates as head coach of the Aquinas girls' varsity basketball team.

The 1986 graduate of Aquinas served as an assistant coach to Bates on this year's Little Irish team, which — led by Reynders' younger sister, Amy — advanced to the state public high school girls' Class B finals in Glens Falls. AQ fell to Albertus Magnus (Rockland County) in the state championship
