Prelate: Elections only first step

MILAN, Italy - Nelson Mandela's victory in South Africa's first all-race elections is just the first step in a long process of national reconciliation, said Archbishop Lawrence P. Henry of Cape Town.

The 59-year-old archbishop, who as a person of mixed race was eligible to vote for the first time in his life April 27, said, "the next five years will be very important for the future of South Africa and for the policy of national unity."

An interview with Archbishop Henry, a participant in the special Synod of Bishops for Africa, was published May 3 by Avvenire, a Milan-based Catholic newspaper.

Just as Mandela and President Frederik W. de Klerk, head of the National Party that formulated the racial segregation policies of apartheid almost 50 years ago, had to work together to bring about the elections, they will have to cooperate to bring democracy, peace and equality, Archbishop Henry said.

"Mandela and the other leaders of the African National Congress alone will not be enough," the archbishop said. "They need the other parties," including the Zulu's Inkatha Freedom Party, which came in third in the late Cooperation and reconciliation are the only ways forward, he said.

"When we were oppressed, our only hope was liberty," he said. "It would truly be terrible if the blacks, once they nad won the majority and the exercise of power, were to go against the principles of peaceful coexistence and pardon."

Revenge would only lead the country backward, Archbishop Henry said.

The work of the church, he said, is "to be the critical conscience of the nation. We must say what is just and proclaim the truth. We had condemned the racist policies of the South African government. If Mandela does not adopt just measures, we also will tell him that he is wrong.'

Archbishop Wilfrid F. Napier of Durban, South Africa, said the elections showed that "the great majority of South Africans desire peace and tranquility, and they showed it with an extraordinary spirit of good will."

The archbishop, also attending the synod and voting for the first time, told Vatican Radio May 3, "through the vote, the people were able to express their own wishes in an atmosphere that was mostly calm and serene."

"Finally, the South African people were given an opportunity to realize what had been their greatest desire for many years, and that was to be active subjects of their own destiny," said Archbishop Napier, who under the apartheid system was classified as colored, or mixed race.

League to place advertisements in N.Y. subways

By Tracy Early Catholic News Service

NEW YORK - The Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights announced April 25 that it will place 2,500 ads on the New York subways that tell riders "condoms don't save lives" and that "restraint does."

The message is intended as a direct challenge to ads placed by the Gay Men's Health Crisis that promote condoms, showing persons of the same sex kissing each other while holding condoms. The ads read: "Young, Hot, Safe!"

A League statement said that "at least in most instances" the cause of unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted disease was "moral irresponsibility."

"What young people need to be taught is abstinence," the League said. "There is something terribly perverse about a society that tells young people to abstain from smoking but doesn't have the moral courage to tell them to abstain from sex."

The text of the League ads reads: 'Want to Know a Dirty Little Secret? CONDOMS DON'T SAVE LIVES. But Restraint Does. Only fools think condoms are foolproof. Remember, better safe than sorry.'

William A. Donohue, League president, said in an April 28 interview that the ads would initially be placed in the subways only in June, but that the campaign might be continued later.

The 11-by-28-inch ads cost $5,000 to produce and $10,000 to install.

The time is right to boost your Summer sales with two of upstate New York's largest weekly newspapers, the Catholic Courier and The Catholic SUN.

More than 60% of the Catholic Courier's 48,000 subscribing households are concentrated in the greater Rochester area, with readership in another 11 Southern Tier and Finger Lakes counties as well. More than half of the Courier's subscribers say they make a point of reading the paper's advertisements.

The SUN, published from Syracuse, is delivered by mail to 45,000 households in seven Central New York and Southern Tier counties.

Many parishes, groups and organizations publish their summer festivals, retreats, barbeques, and other fundraisers in the calendar pages of our Summer Guide. We overprint extra copies for parishioners to pick-up in the church vestibules from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

This issue has a three month shelf life, and if you're looking to boost summer sales for your business ... don"t miss this one! Call Kathy Welsh at 716-328-4340 for more information Country House Restaurant 6007 Lake Rd. (Rt. 18) Sodus, New York 14551 315-483-9154
