32 Help Wanted

President, Aquinas Institute

Aquinas Institute in Rochester, New York, is seeking a new President to begin in the 1994-95 school year. Aquinas Institute is a private, independently governed, coeducational, Catholic, secondary school with 900 students; has three-tiered academic curriculum to meet the students' varied abilities and goals. Students may enroll in a combination of honors, Regents, and local courses. Within each level, individual achievement and academic excellence are encouraged and recognized. With this curriculum, Aquinas' sound educational foundation enables over 96% of its graduates to pursue post-secondary education studies.

Aquinas is looking for a new President whose management and leadership style will direct the Institute into the twenty-first century, building upon the strong foundations dating back almost 75 years. The President must provide direction and guidance to the development and execution of the curricular and co-curricular elements of the educational program; lead a strong, cohesive student-centered professional staff (both faculty as well as administrative); and be able to articulate the educational needs of the school within a development context. Past experience should include a significant leadership role that produced positive results across the institution.

The ideal candidate will possess a Masters Degree in Education or Administration and five years progressively responsible administration experience in preferably secondary education. In keeping with the Aquinas Institute tradition, the candidate should foster and support Christian ideals. Development, alumni relations, and admissions experience are desirable since Aquinas competes for students and resources in this educationally rich Rochester community.
