

PARTNERS AGAINST VIOLENCE

NEED YOU.

Constance Henton
Parent

Every week innocent people in our community die from senseless violence. When our son left home for Bible study, we had no idea we would never see him alive again.

Andy Meloni
Sheriff

Violence is no longer an isolated problem. It's everywhere. No matter where you live, you can't leave violence for government to handle alone.

Herb Washington
Businessman

It's not a governmental problem. Violence is a people problem. People like you and me must become involved in doing something to end it.

Bishop Clark

The solutions may be improved parenting, real jobs, better education, after school programs, more police.

Bob King
County Executive

These are all worthwhile goals. But first, we must begin to coordinate our efforts. For only then will we sufficiently mobilize public opinion to reduce violence.

Van White, Counsel to Mayor Johnson

Unified coordinated effort is the one real hope we have. Hand to hand, block by block, together we can turn this community around.

Louise Slaughter
Member of Congress

In memory of young people already lost and in the hope of losing no more, volunteer. Please call to help us form a partnership against violence.

Gary Mervis, Founder
Camp Good Days

Camp Good Days is organizing the effort to recruit volunteers to help end violence everywhere in our community. The first step is to form a committee and develop a plan to coordinate the activities of many agencies, organizations, and individuals. Once the plan is in place, each volunteer will be called to do whatever he or she chooses to do to help prevent and control violence. Call today to volunteer to help develop the plan or to do whatever you do best once the plan is in place to help end violence in our community.
