Festival celebrates food grown au naturel

Rochester's Public Market, 280 N. Union St., Oct. 2 hosted "Organic Day at the Market" in honor of Organically Grown Month. Sponsored by the Politics of Food Program, the festival celebrated organically grown produce in which no chemical fertilizers are used to treat the food or soil. In addition to naturally grown foods, the event featured music, ethnic dancing, baked goods and fresh apple cider. (Clockwise from right) Kris Agard selects a few ears of corn out of a plentiful mound; Julia Lange hoists an organically grown watermelon that is just her size; Marty Maxwell (left), Joe Falanga and Jim Reilly work on creating fresh apple cider from organically grown apples.
