

“Do you see me in the media?”

The mission of the Rochester Diocese Women's Commission members, which are pictured above, is to draw attention to the global, national and local issues concerning women in the church and in the larger community. One such issue is the influence of mass media in shaping culture.

Through the Catholic Communications Campaign, you support and recognize movies, television programs, and publications that promote a society where women's rights and gifts are respected.

Your contribution helps provide a positive answer to the question: "Do I see me in the Media?"

For information on how Catholics can explore and respond to media images of women, contact the diocesan Office of Communications, at (716) 328-3210. And please be generous in donating to this year's Communications Campaign June 8-9.
