

'Fresh' look to new year

More than 800 incoming college freshmen from the University of Rochester began their year by giving back to the community — in advance. On Aug. 20, the annual Wilson Day celebration of community service, the students collectively volunteered more than 4,000 hours to not-for-profit agencies across Rochester. At Corpus Christi School, Rochester, helping prepare for the new school year, were, clockwise from left: Craig Linder and Josh Goodman, on the crew that cleaned classrooms and moved furniture; Marissa Scalia, preparing the hallways for paint; and Judy Merritt and Nira Simhai applying a fresh coat of paint.

Honored for the past three years by Money Magazine as one of the nation's best college buys

- Among the top ten percent of colleges nationwide.
- Among the top 25 schools in the northeast.
