If you know of a teen who attends a Catholic high school and Catholic youth group — and who is also helping to organize a new youth group being launched at another Catholic church — you’d say that person is pretty immersed in his or her faith.

You’d also be describing the activities of Ryan Lawlor, a Methodist. That’s right, a Methodist.

Ryan, 16, is a lifelong member of Grace United Methodist Church in Rochester. He is also a junior at Aquinas Institute and an active participant in the Sacred Heart Cathedral youth group.

Ryan is currently working to bridge his faith with that of Catholics by helping to speakers.

“It really has been a true partnership. We all work together and respect each other’s ideas,” Ryan said. He serves as a teen delegate on the group’s adult planning committee, which includes members from Grace United Methodist and Holy Rosary.

Ryan said it’s important that the churches join forces in providing a needed outlet for the youths.

“The more we work together, the better off we’ll be — and the better off the neighborhood will be in the end,” Ryan remarked. “You couldn’t really tell if you’re Catholic or Methodist at the meetings. It’s like you’re here to do a
