Coming to you LIVE...

Bishop Kearney television cameraman Chris Avena operates the camera during a broadcast Oct. 23.

"We have a wonderful lunch — the very famous pizza logs," news anchor Cassandra Brown announced on a recent Thursday morning.

Chances are, Barbara Walters and Jane Pauley never led off a broadcast with news items of this sort. Then again, they never had the good fortune of working for KBC-TV.

For the past eight years, Bishop Kearney High School has operated its very own in-house television station. KBC-TV not only gives students the chance to engage in creative fun, but also to get early hands-on experience toward potential broadcasting careers.

"It's helped me a lot. Most high schools don't offer a program like

Jerome added, students can narrow down the area of TV broadcasting they most prefer.

"You start figuring out what you like to do," Jerome remarked.

KBC-TV got its start under the direction of former BK instructor Brother Paul Hannon, CFC, during the 1990-91 school year. Originally known as KBS-TV, the station's beginnings were humble: It
